

A question of access

"We're the new kid on the block," said Dick Duggan of the Wilmington Handicapped Affairs Committee. Duggan was among the town officials who spoke at a "meet your officials" night last week, run by the Wilmington League of Women Voters. The Handicapped Affairs Committee has the slogan "Access Is Mandatory" (AIM) — meaning that all public buildings should be made accessible to people who must travel in wheelchairs, or are handicapped in any manner. Ironically, the hall where the LWV meeting was held is not yet accessible. The Knights of Columbus are planning to build a ramp in the spring.

Town officials speak at LWV forum

In keeping with its purpose to promote political responsibility through informed and active participation of citizens in government, the League of Women Voters of Wilmington sponsored a public meeting, "Meet your town officials," Thurs., Jan. 17.

Sixty town officials and interested citizens gathered at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Wilmington to hear town committee persons and elected local officials, State Representative James Miceli and Town Manager Reginald Stapeczynski give an overview of what their responsibilities are, and what their current agenda include. Committees represented were:

Board of health, recreation commission, council on aging, planning board, redevelopment authority, permanent building committee, conservation commission, housing authority, handicapped affairs committee, and community schools. The gathering proved to be interesting and informative.

The League of Women Voters is a non-partisan organization with membership open to men and women 18 years of age and older who are interested in being informed and active participants in local, state and federal government. Information about membership may be obtained through membership person Pat Rodan, 657-7117.

Next month, the Wilmington League will be sponsoring a "Water Awareness Night" at the Wilmington Public Library on February 28 from 8 to 10 p.m. The program will include a slide show entitled, "One County's Water," the speakers from the Ipswich River Watershed Association, Wilmington Water and Sewer Commission, and the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs.

New treatment plant on warrant

by Arlene Surprenant
Funding for a new water treatment plant in North Wilmington will be one of the articles under consideration at the annual Town Meeting April 27.

The Water and Sewer Commission hopes to get town approval for a bond issue for the plant. According to Commissioner Arthur Smith, they also expect a 50 percent reimbursement of eligible costs from the state through grant monies.

The treatment plant, patterned after the one at Butters Row, will be built to improve the water quality in the North Wilmington area. At last Thursday's meeting, commissioners met with Alan Silbovitz and Leo Peters of Weston and Sampson Engineers Inc., an environmental consulting firm, to discuss treatment materials and the site study the firm had undertaken.

With a choice of carbon, mixed media, or conventional media for treatment, commissioners elected to go with carbon as it makes it easier to remove color and gives an excellent quality of water. The one drawback, said Silbovitz, is cost, as carbon is more expensive, initially. And rather than use a surface wash system pump, which tends to pulverize carbon, they are thinking of using a high pressure air blower as it adds air to carbon.

Several sites are presently under consideration for the plant's location. Silbovitz said his firm had narrowed the choices to three: Barrows site, Brown's Crossing or Salem Street.

Of the three sites considered, the commission decided to go with either Brown's Crossing on Andover Street (which is Wilmington's oldest pumping station and would require an easement near the railroad line) on Salem Street.

When asked later what the commission was looking for, Smith said they need a site which would make a hook-up "practical."

There is some possibility of hooking the two sites together and sizing the plant to include the Barrow's site, hydraulically. Now the commission has to contact property owners at the two sites and notify the DEQE on the type of treatment material they will use.

As far as the physical structure itself, Smith said they want a permanent building which will be "built to last." It will feature a brick exterior, which will be attractive and "vandal proof," and minimum square footage to make it less costly. Unlike the Butters Row plant, there will be "no accommodation for anything" in the building except the basics and a storage room for chemicals. The plant will require three to five acres of land, providing it's all usable.

Frank Soracco and Bill Jones of Dana Perkins Assoc., the consulting engineers for Tambone Corp., next came before the commission to explain the water main extension, to service Wilmington Technology Park.

Jones said that Tambone proposes to continue the existing line up Ballardvale Street, switching sides of the road, bringing it into the first building, and extending it as a 12 ductal.

He next asked for input on a 24' by 30' pumping station to be built off Research Drive in the middle of the Park. The station, which is already in the design stage and will be completed next January, is necessary to boost water pressure, especially for the extensive sprinkler system.

Smith suggested the station be tall to discourage vandals and consist of brickwork, steel doors and no windows or doorknobs to keep outsiders from breaking in, a problem the Water and Sewer Commission has had with its own stations.

It will also be fenced in, said Jones and have a thermal vent for summer and an alarm system.

Though the pumping station will be owned and maintained by Tambone Corp., commissioners were asked to give approval on the final design and be available in case of an emergency.

Water Department Superintendent Paul Duggan agreed to use his regular maintenance man to handle simple emergencies such as pushing a restart button in case of pump failure.

The suggestion was made by Chairman George Allan to put an alarm in the fire dept., since they could also respond to an emergency situation.

Two hats in ring for selectmen's race

Political season has officially opened in Wilmington, but so far, there is only one contest. Selectman Bob Cain and David J. Fitzgerald of 135 Main St.

have taken out papers for the selectmen's seat currently held by Cain.

Cain is the only selectman up for re-election this year.

Other officials whose terms expire this year are School Committee members Robert G. Peterson and Linda T. McMenimen, Housing Authority Chairman Kevin McMillan, Moderator Michael Cairra, and Regional Vocational School Committee member Frank McLean.

McLean has announced that he will not seek re-election.

The town election will be held on Saturday, April 20. The annual town meeting will be one week later, on April 27.

Nomination papers may be taken out until March 6. They must be submitted to the town clerk by March 8.

The final day to submit articles for the town meeting is Feb. 15.

Democrats to caucus Feb. 9

Registered Democrats in Wilmington will be holding a caucus on Saturday, February 9, 1985 at 2:00 P.M. to elect delegates to the 1985 Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

The Convention, which will be held in Springfield on May 18, 1985, will adopt a Party Platform. Wilmington will be electing 10 delegates and two alternates equally divided between men and women, to send to the Convention. The apportioned number of delegates has been allocated on the basis of a formula giving equal weight to the Democratic Party registration and the average vote for Democratic candidates in the last general elections for governor and president for which figures were available at the time delegate tabulations were prepared.

Ralph Peterson will call the caucus at the Fourth of July Building on Middlesex Avenue. The caucus is open to all registered Democrats, persons ineligible to register and media representatives. The only persons eligible to participate in any portion of the caucus are those who are registered Democrats in the ward or town as of December 31, 1984. There will be no absentee or proxy voting.

Candidates for delegate and alternate must also be present

Blood drive next week

The American Red Cross will conduct a major blood drive next Wednesday at the Regional Health Center, Salem Street, North Wilmington. The drive is to ensure that Wilmington persons in need of an emergency transfusion will be guaranteed an available supply of blood.

Participating are many organizations. The Regional Health Center and the Red Cross are being joined by the Rotary Club, the Lions Club, the Friendship Lodge of Masons and the Wilmington Firefighters.

Donors will be scheduled at the Regional Health Center from noon to 6 p.m.

A committee of 10 volunteers, headed by Raymond McNamara, is calling 1,000 registered donors to schedule them for the blood bank. Anyone who is 17 years of age, weighs at least 110 pounds and is in good health can become a donor.

For an appointment call 657-3910, ext. 567. Walk-ins will be welcome.

Wilmington man charged after fatal pedestrian accident

Tewksbury police have charged a 19-year-old Wilmington man with motor vehicle homicide after the car he was allegedly driving struck and killed a 36-year-old Tewksbury woman walking along Main Street early last Sunday morning.

Catherine DeSanris, 36, of 29 Franklin St., Tewksbury was pronounced dead at the scene of the 3:36 a.m. pedestrian accident on Main Street near the intersection of Adams Street in South Tewksbury near the Wilmington line.

Police on the scene arrested Timothy J. Grant, 19, of 2 Davis Rd., Wilmington and charged him with driving while intoxicated and motor vehicle homicide.

According to reports, Grant was driving his 1977 Mercury south on Main Street toward the Wilmington line when he allegedly struck DeSanris while she was walking alone near 2571 Main Street. Investigating Officer James Luz' report indicates that the passenger side of the car Grant was allegedly driving struck DeSanris who then fell onto the hood and hit the windshield before falling off the vehicle and onto the ground.

Police say DeSanris was walking near the curbside in the southbound lane of the street and was headed in a northerly direction at the time of the accident. Police can not say why she was walking alone on the street at that hour. She was pronounced dead at the scene.

Luz' report also indicates that Grant told police he did not see the woman but had felt something hit the car. According to reports, Grant allegedly turned his vehicle around and stopped it in the northbound lane to see what had happened.

Chief Stewart to address Chemical People

On February 5, Tuesday evening, 7:30 at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington, Chief of Police Bobby Stewart of the Wilmington Police Dept. will present the 1983-84 status report on alcohol and drug abuse for the community of Wilmington.

Just a little over a year ago the Chemical People Project was launched in coordination with the National PBS broadcast in November of 1983. During this time Wilmington has instituted a strong alcohol and drug abuse policy in its schools, created an alcohol enforcement unit in the police department, and churches and civic groups have presented informative awareness programs throughout the town.

"There is no doubt about it, we have a serious problem in Wilmington and the battle on drug and alcohol abuse is far from over," said Chief Stewart.

"The basic objective of our police department is to prevent crime and protect the safety and welfare of all our citizens. To carry out these sworn duties we must have the support and aid of all our citizens."

Wilmington police news

It was "default warrant week," in the Wilmington Police Department during the week of January 15 to 22. A total of eight persons were arrested by virtue of having their name in default warrants. One man had three warrants listed against him.

Default warrants are today listed in inter-departmental hookups. Police in any town can learn whether or not there is a warrant against an individual while they are talking with that individual after an (for instance) accident.

On January 15 three persons were arrested in other towns, by virtue of Wilmington warrants.

Billerica police arrested Walter G. Sennet of Billerica on a traffic default. Lowell police arrested John L. Simos of Lowell on a minor traffic default. Littleton police arrested Francis W. Motta of Littleton, formerly of North Reading, on a warrant dating from 1979, charging indecent assault and battery.

Thursday evening, Jan. 16, Officer Steve Parsons arrested Kevin Moran of Lawrence after an accident near Lucci's, when a computer check revealed that the Carlisle police had a default warrant for Moran.

Monday morning, Jan. 21, Roger Martinez of Drury Lane, Wilmington was arrested by Officer Steve Mauriello by virtue of three default warrants from three police departments, Wilmington, Billerica and Malden. Martinez was taken directly to the Woburn District Court.

Monday evening Deputy Chief Nally and Officer McCue arrested William Sullivan of Worcester at the Worcester House of Correction. A default warrant had been issued by a six man jury in Lowell, for conspiracy to violate the narcotic drug laws. Sullivan was taken to Wilmington for the night, and then to the Lowell District Court Tuesday morning.

James Dunnett, 18, of Woburn Street, Wilmington was arrested Saturday morning by Officer Frank Hancock. Dunnett was charged with operating while under the influence of alcohol, and failing to display an inspection sticker.

Theron Hamlin, 18, of Grace Drive, Wilmington was arrested by Officer King, after an investigation into an auto accident

Saturday on Concord Street. He was charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol, being a minor transporting alcoholic beverages. He was later bailed for a Monday court appearance.

There were 11 accidents in Wilmington during the past week, and a total of 16 alarms. Ten arrests were made. There was one case of assisting other departments, and police responded to three disturbances.

One case of assault and battery, four cases of breaking and entering, and three cases of domestic problems were reported. There were three cases of larceny, five of suspicious activity, and six reports of vandalism.

One stolen vehicle was recovered. There were two cases of medical assistance and three incidents of protective custody.

Lawrence Voke offers site for Ristuccia rink

The Greater Lawrence Technical School District Committee has offered to make a site available for the memorial hockey rink being proposed by Bernard Restuccia, according to the Andover Townsman. Andover Selectman Chairman Donn Byrne announced the offer in a selectmen's meeting in that town on January 14.

The technical school, which serves seven towns and cities, has "three or four locations" where the recreation center could be located. There is a 45 acre campus, at 57 River Road, Andover. According to a letter from the superintendent - director, the site might be "ideal."

Superintendent Louis E.

Gleason pointed out that the site is in a largely industrial area, and is located near Route 93. Andover water and sewer lines serve the site. No rezoning would be necessary. There already exists enough parking to serve the center.

Gleason had several more reasons which made him favorable to the rink being located on the 45 acre site. Local industries, he said, could find a use for the memorial rink for industrial shows and meetings. "Many of the skills required to maintain such a facility, are taught at this school."

Selectman Byrne, according to the Townsman, said that the technical school officials do not intend to campaign for the center. They intend, rather, "to open a friendly door should (the selectmen) wish to consider or discuss the matter in detail."

The original Andover area, proposed by Restuccia, 113 acres off Cross Street, is no longer available. It was dropped by the selectmen in their January 14 meeting, as a potential site. The town meeting of Andover would be unable to vote for the Cross Street site without approval of the school committee. Also dropped was a proposal to use an old gravel bank area.

Andover High School and the technical school area are the only two sites now on the list as being proposed for the memorial rink.

Edward Cawley

Cawley to head bank office in Tewksbury

Edward "Ted" Cawley has been named branch officer and manager of the The Central Savings Bank's new Tewksbury branch. The branch will open in late February at 1800 Main St.

"Cawley brings to the Central many years of commercial and retail banking experience," said Eric Thomson, Central Savings Bank president.

Cawley is a graduate of the University of Lowell with a degree in business administration. He has taken extensive training in various phases of banking. He lives in Lowell and is a director of the Greater Lowell Council for Children, The Lowell Girls' Club, is a member of the D'Youville Manor Men's Guild, St. John's Men's Guild, Beaconcrest Nursing Home, University of Lowell Alumni Association and Rotary International.

Spotlighters to teach tap, break dancing

The Silver Lake Spotlighters' (SLS) tap dance classes, offered to adults and teens last fall, has been brought back by popular demand. Those who have always wanted to "shuffle off to Buffalo," may now have the chance.

Tap classes begin Thursday, January 24, at the SLS rehearsal space in the Whitefield School, 342 Middlesex Ave., Wilmington. The eight-week course is offered for beginners at 6:30 p.m., beginners level II at 7:30 and intermediate at 8:30.

SLS instructor CB Hetherington is one of Boston's finest jazz tap dancer - teacher - choreographers. Her style emphasizes rhythm, syncopation and musicality, combining techniques that range from contemporary Broadway to the "old tap masters." Hetherington, who will choreograph the Spotlighters' spring musical, Music Man, performs frequently in New York and Boston and has choreographed locally for the New Ehrlich Theatre, Cooperative Theatre for Children in Winchester, and North End Union Theatre Company.

An exciting new addition to the SLS dance classes is break dancing for teens and pre-teens. Taught by experienced break dance performer and teacher Ron Paula, these eight week classes are offered beginning Monday, January 21, at 3:30 and 4:30 p.m. for pre-teens and at 5:30 p.m. for teens. Students will learn all aspects of break dancing (top rock, bottom rock, spins, freezes and combinations) as well as the moves of Electric Boogie (wave, pop and tick).

Tuition for SLS sponsored dance classes is $40 for SLS or Young People's Theatre members, $55 for non-members. Enrollment is limited so register now by calling Janice Rudnicki, SLS membership chairperson, at 657-7278.

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

Did you ever catch a polywog? Did you ever hear a bullfrog moan?

Did you ever see a six inch, copper colored bloodsucker cycle through the water?

You can. They are all in Silver Lake, but maybe not for long! Silver Lake is our town's only natural resource and this resource is in danger of being blighted when the proposed office is constructed on the Route 38 site along the lakeside.

I don't think that this particular site should be developed; it should be made available as a recreational site for our town - a place to swim, to fish, to boat, to polywog, and on quiet summer nights to listen to the croak of a large mouth bullfrog.

If we save Silver Lake now and use it as a recreational site it will be available in the future also.

Sincerely,
Gerry O'Reilly

Dear Larz:

What is going to happen to us old people . . . 70 and over?

I am nearly 80 years old, have pneumonia, an infection in my throat and ears and am deaf due to my condition. I have been informed by Blue Cross - Blue Shield and Medicare that a case like mine is not serious enough to be hospitalized. It is considered a home care case. I live alone and although I have a son who checks in on me every morning and night it is still a very difficult situation.

What happens to all those other people who have no family?

It seems as though BC-BS and Medicare are just pieces of paper which us old people cannot use anymore.

Your doctor can claim you should be in the hospital, but if the doctors paid by BC-BS and Medicare claim you are not sick enough you are sent home . . . in some cases . . . to die.

We older people helped our country get to where it is today.

We earned little pay and tried to save for our old age. Most of us enrolled in BC-BS and Medicare - never dreaming that when most needed our hospitalization would be taken away or not available.

We older people must fight to live and seemingly enough fight for fair coverage under BC-BS and Medicare.

We have put in several thousands of dollars over our lifetime and now we are being cut in available hospitalization.

I am told that in time we will be allowed hospital care. While we are waiting for this "in time" procedure, the old people are filling the cemeteries.

Come, old people, FIGHT, don't give up. We must fight to get back what is due us. It's the squeaky wheel that gets the grease. Are you just going to remain quiet and die; or are you willing to get together and fight?

At present I am too sick and weak to fight this. However, when I'm better, I want all old people over 70 to fight this injustice with me. Let's not allow ourselves to be cast aside like a worn out shoe. Why should money organizations like BC-BS and Medicare keep us from proper care when we are old?

We must fight like Frank Manning, Representative Miceli, Senator McGovern and Coordinator Brabant. Thank God for people like these who back us up.

Let us get up and fight, NOW. Write your state and government representatives, your senators, your newspapers. Let your voice be heard.

I know how important this issue is . . . for it's 2 a.m. as I write my letter. I am unable to sleep due to constant coughing. I'm here alone not knowing whether I will live or die . . . instead of being in a hospital . . . thinking that we older folks must fight back!

Sincerely,
Hetta Thompson,
Tewksbury

Resolving the dilemma with Reading Light

To be a commissioner of the Reading Municipal Light Department (RMLD) is not an exactly happy job. The RMLD is facing some horrendous problems because of the Seabrook project, in New Hampshire. Seabrook is one of quite a few nuclear plants in which construction costs have escalated in recent years. It is not yet performing its function, that of distributing low cost power.

Like the managers of utility plants, commissioners are obliged to look ahead and plan for the future. They must be able to supply power to their community when community demands are made.

A dozen or so years ago nuclear energy seemed the road to travel. Boston Edison was one of the many utilities which had nuclear plants in operation, plants which were distributing power at low cost.

The commissioners of those towns and cities in Massachusetts which had their own electrical distribution system took note. They formed an Association of Massachusetts Municipal Managers, which was called MMWEC. They engaged to support the construction of a nearby power plant (Seabrook) to solve power problems of the future. This they would do by local bonding.

Most of those commissioners were pledging the faith and credit of their own community. In Reading, no one noticed, there were four communities, not one. That is the root of the difficulties of the RMLD today.

Officials in the three other communities were not consulted. Now, when bills of millions of dollars are staring the RMLD commissioners in the face, the three other communities can expect much higher costs for electric power. In a year or so the soon to skyrocket costs should show in light department bills.

It is an unhappy circumstance for the officials of the RMLD. Officials of the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce have taken notice and want to talk with the commissioners. They have not been successful.

The refusal to talk can be understood. Attorneys will almost always advise clients to keep silent under similar circumstances.

There has been more than one meeting of which the commissioners seemed to take no note. The selectmen of Reading, invited, did not appear.

Of course the selectmen have nothing to say about the light department. Their only function comes in the approval of bonds, which are voted by the town meeting. They do not wish to become engaged in controversy.

The Reading Chronicle, last week for the first time noted the business of the light rate controversy. A story written by Mark Pillsbury, a staff member, reported on the doings of the Wilmington and North Reading selectmen, and the input from Lynnfield. Pillsbury interviewed one of the commissioners and a few statements were made.

Francis Doughty, the chairman, pointed out, quite correctly, that Reading does not have to pay taxes to other towns, and that the payments that have been made were voluntary in nature. He also pointed out that the RMLD is by law allowed to make an eight percent profit.

This year, he said, the department "will not come close to that." He also pointed out that the Town Meeting of Reading is responsible for the vote, on bonds of the RMLD.

It may be important that Mr. Doughty has made a statement. The Wilmington Chamber of Commerce some time ago hinted that there should be a conversation with light department officials. There are some experts in the business in the employ of the Chamber.

Somewhere, somehow, hopefully, there can be a meeting where an exchange of opinions and options can be discussed.

Wilmington's cranberry bogs

Wilmington is a town which owns two cranberry bogs. There is a 10 acre bog off Shawsheen Avenue and there is a four acre bog, sort of "behind" the town hall, the new town hall that is. Both are in the custody of the Conservation Commission and both are becoming overgrown with sprouting trees.

In the mid 1800s there were many places in Wilmington where one could pick cranberries. In addition to cranberry bogs there were cranberry patches, in or near the back yards of homes. Cranberry patches were similar to strawberry patches, a place where homeowners could pick up a few of the tart but succulent berries for the family table.

Henry Sheldon had such a cranberry patch. He was proud of it. It was on what is now Avco land near the tennis courts.

Silas Brown had one too. It was in what is now Hathaway Acres, near Draper Drive. The list could go on and on.

Cranberry bogs were different. They were commercial enterprises. What is now Rotary Park was such a cranberry bog, owned by the lady who called herself Mrs. Dr. Hiller. It was six acres in extent.

Like the bog on Shawsheen Avenue, the one that is "behind" the Town Hall was located on both sides of Lubbers Brook. It was made about 1880 by a man named J.H. Winn, of Winchester. Winn was probably a member of the well known family of that name, which lived in Woburn two centuries ago.

Henry Harnden had a mill before the Civil War on Lubbers Brook, just upstream from the Glen Road bridge. He owned land (100 acres) on both sides of the brook for half a mile upstream and half a mile downstream. He lived in the big white farmhouse, now the Papaliohis home.

Winn bought the downstream 40 acres from what had been the property of Henry Harnden. It was mostly forest, white pine.

He cleared about 10 acres, and put in a four acre cranberry bog. What is now the Ness home, on Miller Road, was probably the home he built in which a caretaker could live. The dam for the cranberry bog is on a line between Everett Avenue and Broad Street.

Every now and then owning a cranberry bog could be a prosperous business. There was a time in the 1920s when everyone was envious of the people who owned the Shawsheen Avenue bog. It was reported to have sold $10,000 worth of berries in one year, grown on 10 acres.

Presumably the Winn bog also made money. Successors of the first owner built a sort of cranberry house, near Everett Avenue, to be used when they weeded the bog, or when they harvested the berries, in November.

There were other interesting things about that bog, for the young people of the Silver Lake area, back in the 1920s.

There was a substantial dam, part of it was wooden which was put in place only during the winter, to flood the land, and thus protect the cranberry vines. There was a wooden frame, with a heavy timber, possibly eight by eight inches across the top.

That timber was the only way to cross the brook, unless one took off shoes and waded across.

As such it was a challenge to all young boys, during non-school hours. Everyone walked across.

There is no record of anyone ever having fallen into the brook.

Fishing was another sport. The bottom of the brook, at the dam, had wooden planks, to hold down the sand. Perch, in the springtime, would swim upstream, headed probably for Silver Lake, where they could spawn. At almost any time of the year one could see eels.

There was a time when some young men acquired what they called eel spears. The idea was to spike the eels, as they swam upstream. No one, as far as is known, was ever successful.

It was a very nice place, in a rural setting. There were blueberries for the picking, where Wicks Circle is today. And, on the other side, a quick trip through Winn Woods (as it was called) led to Pop Neilson's corn field. That's where the town hall is today.

Fresh corn could be picked in July and August, and then taken through the woods to the sand patch, near the dam. That sand patch is no more. Today it is filled with young trees. It was a safe place to build a bonfire and roast those ears of corn.

Fresh corn, served at home by the mothers of those boys, was probably much better.

The Winn family finally lost interest in trying to grow cranberries. Probably economic conditions were not satisfactory. The town eventually took over the cranberry bog, for non-payment of taxes. It is now controlled by the Conservation Commission.

There is now a bridge of sorts, over the brook, which the town improved as a pedway to the Glen Road School, now the town hall. Bicycles and snowmobiles have no trouble in crossing from one side to the other. Maybe autos can be driven over that bridge.

Winn's Woods is almost a junkyard. There are all sorts of trails made by trailbikes and snowmobiles. In a few more years some of the small trees in Winn's cranberry bog are going to be big trees.

There is no one named Winn, to take care of the place today.

Winn's Bog

Winn's Bog, on Lubbers Brook, was once a productive cranberry bog. Today, it is becoming overgrown with trees and shrubs. This view is looking upstream toward Glen Road from the pedway connecting Everett Avenue and Broad Street.

The pedway

The pedway at the lower end of Winn's Bog would be replaced by a road, under a proposal by developers Joseph Langone and Richard Stuart, who are planning to build a condominium project off Broad Street.

Collecting Sebastian miniatures

by Arlene Surprenant
Sebastian miniatures are inherently New England. The creation of Marblehead artist Prescott W. Baston in 1938, the miniature figurines now grace the homes of tens of thousands of avid collectors across the United States.

Prescott Baston was obviously a master of his craft. A man known for his friendly, outgoing personality and high moral and gentle character, Baston turned out more than 800 varieties of ceramastone and pewter figures since his first Shaker Man and Lady in 1938.

What are Sebastians and what is their appeal?

Sebastians are miniature figurines produced by Prescott Baston, and more recently, by his son Woody after Prescott's unexpected death this past May. Originally made in Baston's Marblehead studio, they are now turned out in quantity but still lovingly hand painted in Lee, New Hampshire.

The inspiration for the many varieties to date came from Prescott's and Woody's fertile imaginations and painstaking research into anything that captured their interest. Subjects range from literary figures such as Dickens and Shakespearean characters to such New England monuments as Faneuil Hall, the Wayside Inn, and the House of Seven Gables. Also popular are their children, family scenes, historical figures, architectural series, sailing ships, and miniatures with patriotic and religious themes.

Sebastian collectors, myself included, are admittedly a breed apart, willing to brave inclement weather and large crowds just for a glimpse of the artist and any new miniatures that crop up every few months. Sebastians, a relatively unknown collectible only a few years ago, is presently enjoying an upsurge in popularity almost unheard of in the collector's field.

Sebastian collectors seem to be most attracted by the detail and accuracy which imbues each miniature with a personality all its own. There is something of both father and son which comes through each unique piece. Many collectors feel that Sebastians reflect the nostalgic spirit of New England — a rugged individualism and vitality evident in such outstanding miniatures as Rockport's Motif No. 1, the Mayflower, the Cranberry Picker, Paul Revere, and the favorite Town Crier.

Many of the early Sebastians were commissioned by certain companies to advertise such products as Alcoa Wrap, Supphose stockings, Chiquita bananas, I.B.M. equipment, and the very popular General Foods Jell-O brand gelatin.

These early figures, turned out in very limited quantities, are now considered rare and sell for more than 500 times the original retail price. Affecting Sebastian value is not only the quantity made, but also the labels affixed to each figurine and the artist's signature on the base of several.

At an auction held at the Sebastian Festival last June in Boxboro, prices for early figurines were indeed high. For instance, the Jell-O Santa brought $660, the Jolly Green Giant brought $700, the beautifully wrought Old Woman in the Shoe pulled in $800, Buffalo Bee went for $1,000, and Speedy Alka Seltzer topped sales at a record $1,100.

More modern Sebastians, many revised versions of earlier pieces, sell for as low as $15 and $20 and, depending on supply and demand, go steadily up in value.

For instance, Emmett Kelley as The Clown, a piece which sold for $15 four years ago and launched my own collection, is now worth $150, not counting the value of Prescott Baston's signature on the bottom. Also, Games in Springtime, a lovely child and hoop picked up for a mere $15 at a neighborhood flea market, is today valued at $75. Such are the fun and rewards of collecting Sebastians.

Luckily for those of us caught up in Sebastian "fever," Woody Baston is quite willing and capable of carrying on the work of his father. Educated at Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts, Woody does some fine figure work, but leans toward finely detailed and breathtaking architectural designs on a miniature scale. He has already produced series reflecting both scenes of New England and American life.

A final word to those of you who would like to begin a Sebastian collection of your own. Seek out those local gift shops and dealers, who not only sell these miniatures, but are knowledgeable on all aspects of collecting in both the primary and secondary markets.

Become a member of the nationwide Sebastian Miniatures Collectors Society formed five years ago, subscribe to the collector's newspaper The Sebastian Exchange Quarterly, and read up on all facets of collection in the Collectors' Handbook.

Most of all, start a collection soon and enjoy it!

Sebastian figures

Figures such as "Games in Springtime" and "The Clown," purchased for $15 each, are now worth many times the original price.

Scout show to mark Diamond Jubilee

With the Scouting program, which started in the United States in 1910, entering its Diamond Jubilee Year, plans are in the making for the largest Scout show ever held in the Greater Lowell area. The event will be presented Saturday, February 9 at the Aleppo Temple Shrine in Wilmington from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Tiger Cubs, Cub Scouts, Scouts and Explorers will put their best "paws" and "feet" forward to welcome everyone to the wonderful world of Scouting. They'll put on shows and demonstrations.

The biggest cake ever seen in Wilmington — prepared by the New England Regional Vocational School, will also be present.

Stage shows will be going on all day, featuring professional headline entertainment, bands, dance groups, and demonstrations by both Scouting and non-Scouting groups.

Boston scenes

Familiar Boston scenes such as the Swanboats and Faneuil Hall are typical of the Sebastian miniatures.

Learning at the Lighthouse School

by Arlene Surprenant

The first thing you notice is that learning is taking place. Not in a stiff, disciplined, hushed atmosphere evident in some of today's classrooms, but in an environment characterized by love and affection between teacher and student, honesty, respect, personalized attention, free interaction, noisy activity, and yes, often a sense of frustration.

Walls are decorated with cloth hangings, oversized posters, colorful pictures, simply printed signs. Shelves, cubby holes, and storage boxes are crammed with day to day learning materials—flash cards, charts, reading matter, simple objects and the like.

Children smile and call out "hello." Teachers keep up a steady patter and throw in a hug or two for reassurance. Nothing is static or "by the book."

To step into this environment is to step into the Lighthouse School, tucked away in a beautifully wooded and kept up section of North Chelmsford.

Formed 17 years ago by a group of people who saw the need for a multi-disabled school, the Lighthouse School touches the lives of 100 handicapped pupils from eastern Massachusetts, including the whole Merrimack Valley, and southern New Hampshire. It was originally founded and continues to be sponsored by the Holy Union of the Sacred Heart, a group of dedicated people who care deeply about the education of special children.

To date, the school is one of three in the state handling this type of special needs students. It provides cost effective services to 55 cities and towns and is supported entirely by state and federal funds.

The population has grown from 25 to 100 students, the limit allowed by law, and youngsters range in age from three to 22 years. Not unexpectedly, there is a long waiting list of children, created by parents and teachers who have heard about the quality of education available at this "home away from home."

Dr. Michael Pappafagos, the committed executive director of the school and five of his fellow administrators, including vocational coordinator and spokesman Steve Ferland, Educational Coordinator Peggy Lynch, Clinical Coordinator Dr. David Mishkin, and Professional Coordinator Tim Fitzpatrick, developed a model program which is very much in evidence today.

According to the unique clinical model, each student is provided with individualized treatment. From the moment of enrollment, the child's problems and backgrounds are analyzed and a "unique individual educational program" is formulated for him.

Ferland stresses that "we don't isolate ourselves to one approach or feel one approach is a panacea." Instead, they try to discover the best approach by looking at a wide and interrelated combination of factors.

Each of the 70 staff members begins a personal relationship and understanding of each child from the outset. Staff members include graduate specialists in training the disabled, vocational instructors, speech therapists, psychologists, health specialists, and an "outreach specialist skilled in providing a bridge to parents and community."

The staff definitely encompasses "a tremendous background and enormous expertise," Ferland says.

Unique to the "comprehensive" program is the philosophy of including the whole family in the educational process. In many instances, parents are supportively encouraged to come to grips and effectively deal with their children's problems. A hotline is available to parents, in combination with extensive visitation of parents to school and school staff to home.

Teachers and staff, too, are provided extra support. After putting in a long day, usually beyond the required 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., and dealing with more than normal stress loads, teachers are accorded an "open door" policy to the executive director. Other personnel also help by answering any personal and professional questions which may arise.

A tour of the physical layout of the building reveals much.

Walking from one classroom to another, you encounter Jamie, Annette, Kellie, Jason, and Rhonda. You learn they have a variety of emotional and physical problems that demand constant attention.

One has a severe disorder called pica, a compulsion to eat anything which comes to hand. Another suffers from brain damage incurred in a car accident. And on and on. Epilepsy, autism, Downs Syndrome, blindness and many other disorders are handled here. But the primary focus of the Lighthouse School's treatment approach is in working with students having multiple problems that require specialized psycho-educational treatment.

And students are not just treated, but taught to the limits of their capabilities. Progress is not judged by the usual standards. Any small advancement is a big step for these youngsters and their proud teachers.

When a child can walk around where before he couldn't even sit up, that's progress. When a child can display a sense of balance on a handmade see-saw without falling off, that's progress. And when one can recognize and match feelings on a chart to a picture on a flash card and communicate that to a teacher, that's progress.

Learning, in many cases, takes place through repetition—the same activity repeated many times in different settings until it becomes second nature. It is reinforced by a reward system that seems to work for those students who need it. A token store is available at Lighthouse School where students who have earned tokens throughout the day can "purchase" something they'd like—a game, toy, pizza, extra time in a favorite class, or even an outing.

With four teachers certified in the Outward Bound program, a favorite reward is going on Outward Bound trips either camping in the Berkshires or on Cape Cod or canoeing down the Saco River in Maine, as was done last year.

A popular place is the developmental classroom for pre-schoolers. Set up like a regular nursery school with a carpet for sitting and colorful storage boxes holding all manner of loc blocks, puzzles, games, and basic skill toys, children are afforded both structured time and playtime.

Activities are changed at a fast pace because of limited concentration and include stories, singing, group situations, and snack time.

In the hygiene unit in another classroom, school nurses teach self-care, personal hygiene, hair styling, and even such basics as brushing your teeth and taking a shower, which are often overlooked by well-meaning families.

By far the most ambitious part of the school is its pre-vocational and vocational training, to ready these youngsters for life in the workforce.

In the pre-vocational classroom, a simulated domestic area and supermarket (formerly a "bank") are found, thanks in part to the expertise of a resident carpenter.

In the domestic area, students learn such simple, taken for granted tasks as laundering, cooking, food preparation, ironing, and making beds. They go to the "supermarket" and study ads on the wall, shop for foods, and handle money, all things necessary for self-reliance after graduating from the Lighthouse School.

Through Project Act, an internal job training program which provides specific paid job assignments within the school, several students are afforded training which, hopefully will lead to outside employment. These pupils learn to punch a time clock along with several marketable skills.

According to vocational teacher John (Jeep) Tarmey, students who enter his department work outside the school during the day and earn upward of four dollars an hour in such entry level jobs as taking orders at the local Burger King or helping out in a nearby florist shop. Recently, the Drum Hill Burger King was shorthanded and called him for extra help, a fact that made him "feel good."

Students are prepared in other fields too, such as the auto industry, carpentry, child care, and more recently, computer training, thanks to a very generous computer system donated by Wang Laboratories. While some pupils are accepted into the Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission, others may be trained well enough to support themselves right away in regular jobs.

Hopefully, says Ferland, the general public will become more "acceptive" of the handicapped and realize that they can learn a skill and become a contributing member of society so they don't have to be placed in dependent positions later in life.

In a society which sees more children being born with disorders or acquiring them in any number of ways, there is a definite need to provide high quality, low cost education to this segment of the population.

The Lighthouse School has met this challenge and will continue to fill this need now and in the future. And, as its name seems to suggest the spokesman Ferland wholeheartedly endorses, it will be a future which looks "very bright" indeed.

Wilmington Youth Hockey

Midget A's stretch unbeaten streak

Facing pressure

Redmen center Barry Dick (32) pulls up and faces some defensive pressure from a Lawrence player in recent MVC boys' hoop action.

The Wilmington Midget A Hockey Team continues to dominate its division with a superb 8-0-1 record.

Led by the super netminding of goaltender John McNally, Wilmington recently shutout a tough Tewksbury team, 6-0. McNally, league leader with a 2.2 goals against average, has put Wilmington at the top of the Midget West Division.

Offensively against Tewksbury, Joe Costabile scored a hat trick while dishing out two assists. Linemates Jeff Brennan, two goals, two assists and Steve Fuller, one goal, three assists finished off the Wilmington attack.

The defense, led by Brian Walsh, Bill Gullage, Jay Joyce and Rich Kurowski, completely dominated Tewksbury's offensive attack.

In other action, Wilmington posted an 8-4 triumph over Acton-Boxboro, with Costabile scoring his second hat trick in as many games. Defenseman Bill Gullage pumped in two goals, while teammates Dave Gardner, Bob Seville, and Steve Fuller contributed one goal apiece.

Sunday, January 13, Melrose became another Wilmington victim in a 4-2 loss. Jeff Brennan led the attack with two goals. Costabile and Fuller also contributed with a goal and two assists each.

Newcomer Dave Marranzini played a hard checking defensive game and promises to be an excellent addition to the team, according to coach Jack Calandrello.

Sunday, January 20 Wilmington defeated Malden in a 9-0 rout. In an awesome display of teamwork, Jeff Brennan and Joe Costabile each scored a hat trick and playmaker (three assists). Steve Fuller added to the scoring with two goals and an assist, while Sean Lambert scored a nifty 15 foot wrist shot assisted by Steve McKenna.

Dave Marranzini, establishing himself with the team, assisted on Fuller's first goal. Butch Alpers, Rich Kurowski and Dave Gardner both played well to round out the team's offense.

Wilmington's tremendous defensive capabilities were again demonstrated against Malden by Brian Walsh, Bill Gullage, Jay Joyce, and Dave Marranzini. John McNally recorded his second shutout of the season.

Coach Calandrello attributes the team's success to the players' willingness to learn a technique that has been in use in Europe for many years. To emphasize the success of this method, the Wilmington defense, in nine games, has held opposing teams to only four goals in the third period. Offensively, the team has scored a total of 51 goals for a 5.7 goals per game average.

Wilmington will strive to maintain its undefeated status against Nashua, New Hampshire, Sunday, January 27, at 10:30 a.m. in Tyngsboro.

Eighth grade comeback falls short

Hoping to avenge an early season defeat at the hands of the Woburn Boys' Club, the Wilmington eighth grade traveling team staged a strong comeback in the fourth quarter, but fell short, 51-49.

Down by eight points at the end of the third quarter, the young Wildcats, sparked by the offensive play of Mark Palmisano and Steve Hanafin, came back to tie the score with one minute remaining in the game when Sean Colclough hit an outside shot.

The scoring was led by Stephen Hanafin with 18, while Mark Palmisano reached his season high with 11 strong points. Michael Buonopane also hit his season high with seven clutch points.

Annual Girl Scout Cookie Sale underway

Friday, January 18 was a big day for Girl Scouts all over northeastern Massachusetts and southern New Hampshire — the first day of the annual Girl Scout Cookie sale.

The Girl Scout Cookie sale is important to Girl Scouts and their troop leaders because it provides the dollars that allow them to carry out all the plans they've been working on all fall. The money raised by troops from the Girl Scout Cookie sale funds activities such as camping trips, field trips, service projects in the community, supplies for other troop projects, and as many activities as there are good ideas in troops. Girl Scouts will be selling cookies through Sunday, February 3.

The slogan for this year's Girl Scout Cookie sale is "Girl Scouting: Where the Future Begins." For many girls, their futures truly begin with the skills and values they learn in Girl Scouting. In today's Girl Scout program, career exploration can begin as early as first, second and third grades and is a major part of the program for junior and senior high school girls. The Girl Scout Cookie sale is one way to invest in the future of a girl.

For information on how to order Girl Scout Cookies, call Spar and Spindle Girl Scout Council at 689-8015.

Maureen MacCarthy is bride

Maureen MacCarthy, daughter of Mrs. Marie MacCarthy of Stoneham and Leo MacCarthy of Ormond Beach, Florida, became the bride of Peter Tenaglia, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Tenaglia, Jr. of Lynn on November 17.

The ceremony was performed before the altar of St. Thomas Church by Father Thomas Reynolds.

Miss Joanne Giardina of Wilmington, cousin of the bride served as maid of honor while the bride's attendants included Mrs. Joanne Vaught of Westford, cousin of the bride; Miss Martha Tenaglia of Lynn, sister of the groom and Miss Cathy McPhee of Stoneham, close friend of the bride.

Benjamin Tenaglia III of Williamsport, Pa., served his brother as best man. Ushers were Andrew Tenaglia of Clinton, Ct., brother of the groom; John MacCarthy of Reading, brother of the bride and Joseph Deney of Malden, friend of the groom.

Nicholas MacCarthy of Natick, nephew of the bride served as ringbearer and Jaclyn Nardella of Needham, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

The new Mrs. Tenaglia is a graduate of Wilmington High School and the University of Lowell. She is presently employed by Marshalls Inc. of Woburn.

Her husband, a graduate of St. Mary's High school, Lynn and Villanova University, Villanova, Pa., is employed by Marshalls Inc., of Chelmsford.

Following a wedding trip to Europe, the couple is now living in Stoneham.

Clogging — a folk dance with Appalachian origins

Arlene Surprenant

Have you ever had an urge to kick up your heels? If so, you might want to join Wilmington's own Sharon Hamson and her Yankee Doodle Cloggers.

Hamson was instrumental in bringing clogging, a sort of "Appalachian square dance" first practiced down south, to the New England area four years ago.

With a background in square dancing, Hamson used to attend many square dance conventions. It was after seeing clogging performed at two separate conventions that she was drawn to this immensely energetic dance form.

She recalls thinking it was a "wonderful activity that hasn't been tapped up here" and decided she wanted to teach it in New England.

So Hamson "literally shut myself up for six months" and taught herself the intricate steps and movements. Her husband Marshall, himself an avid clogger, built a specially designed wooden floor for her in their basement so she could practice in her spare time. And a trip to Georgia in September 1981 to meet Sheila Popwell (credited with the growth of clogging in the United States) and other dance instructors to "pick their brains" reinforced Hamson's desire to teach.

In January 1981, she opened her first class. Today she teaches beginner and intermediate classes in Tewksbury and three advanced classes in Wilmington.

Out of these classes, the Yankee Doodle Cloggers was formed in the spring of 1981. The handicapped team is presently made up of seven couples of all ages. Members come from towns north of Boston and practice two hours a week together as well as many hours on their own.

Belonging to the team requires "a terrific commitment," stresses Hamson. Members have to practice hard, counting and synchronizing every step until routines become second nature. They also have to be able to "scintillate" or sparkle and display stage presence in front of an audience, not easy while concentrating on each movement.

The Yankee Doodle Cloggers also need to purchase white tap shoes and three different costumes, designed by Hamson herself, at an approximate cost of $200.

In keeping with the All-American name, costumes are red, white and blue and patterned after square dancing-folk costumes. Men may sport jeans, checkered shirts, and neckties, while women wear matching blouses, short skirts, and voluminous petticoats requiring "petticoat practice," Hamson says with a laugh.

Clogging is the oldest folk dance in the United States and, claims Hamson, could be considered "the original aerobic dance." Certainly, the constant activity and energy expended reminds one of a fast aerobic workout which makes clogging good for your health as it lowers your blood pressure.

But the dance itself is very intricate, requiring choreographed movements and careful tapping precision. The clogger uses eight basic steps in an up and down movement which, unlike tap dancing, doesn't sweep the dancer across the floor. While the tap dancer is primarily up on his toes and taps to the melody, the clogger's heels move in time to a definite base beat. And team members build up stamina by taking frequent short breaks until they can dance for long periods of time without stopping.

There are several theories about the origin of this unique dance. Perhaps the most accepted theory is that the working people of England developed the "clog" dance wearing their heavy wooden shoes or industrial clogs. They, along with German, Scottish, and Irish immigrants settled in the United States and brought with them their own versions of clogging from their native lands.

And since southern mountain folk didn't write things down, their customs and dance forms were passed orally from one generation to the next. Thus it was incumbent upon someone, namely Hamson's mentor Sheila Popwell, to formulate a clogging vocabulary, name the steps, and invent choreographed dance routines so clogging could be taught nationwide. All of this information is contained in the national magazine The Flop Eared Mule known, Hamson says, as the clogger's "bible."

The Yankee Doodle Cloggers have had a lot of exposure in the past three years.

According to Hamson, her "most exciting" evening was appearing with Roy Clark at a country-western night in 1983. The cloggers also travelled from Rhode Island to New Hampshire in four appearances with Jeannie C. Riley of Harper Valley PTA fame and danced at the Prescott Art Festival in Strawberry Banke and the Lowell Banjo and Fiddle Contest.

They drew "the biggest crowd they've ever had" at the Addison, Vermont County Fair and performed at a square dance clinic in Burlington, Vermont and the Topsfield Fair. Their culminating appearance was on the "Evening Magazine" television show where they taught host Barry Nolan a few intricate dance steps.

The team also does many benefits for charities, senior citizen groups, and other non-profit organizations.

Coming up this St. Patrick's Day in Litchfield, New Hampshire is Hamson's own creation, the Shamrock Shuffle. At this all day festival, clogging enthusiasts will attend dance clinics and end the day with a full dress dance exhibition to which many locals have been invited. And an instructor from the south will be attending, says Hamson, and adds with a gleam in her eye, but only if he gets "green grits for breakfast."

What attracts people to this invigorating dance and what is the future of clogging in New England?

Besides being able to forget your problems in the sheer energy of the dance, the music attracts young and old alike. Though clogging is predominantly done to country pop tunes, some groups use the "very fast" bluegrass music or peppy square dance tunes. More recently, rock music such as "Jump" by the Pointer Sisters has been utilized to appeal to an upcoming generation of dancers.

According to Hamson, "so much fun should not be hidden in the closet." Because anyone — young, old, married or single — can participate, because practice is "such fun" and so healthy, and because of widespread publicity, Hamson predicts clogging will spread in the New England area.

Already a children's team, under the direction of Yankee Doodle Clogger Dale Landis, has been formed. The children, ranging in age from eight to 12 years, made their debut at the recent Cerebral Palsy Telethon at the Northshore Mall.

And, adds Hamson, she hopes to involve children more as they tend to learn quicker and can pass on the intricacies of clogging to future generations — this time by "word of foot."

Hat tricks

Friday was "Hat Day" at the Shawsheen School in Wilmington. Everyone was encouraged to wear a hat, the zanier the better. A project of the student council, the hat day injected a little fun into what would otherwise have been a dreary winter day.

Alternative Education program working at W.H.S.

by Arlene Surprenant
Begun as an experiment in September, the Alternative Education Program at Wilmington High School is now servicing the needs of some 39 pupils.

According to Assistant Principal Jack Lynch, the program was created to "fill a void" between special needs and regular education.

The program was explained in an update at last Wednesday night's school committee meeting.

Under the directorship of Assistant Principal Ed Woods, Alternative Education classes help high school students who have had a history of failure and difficulty with such major subjects as English and math. To be considered for these classes, students had to have failed two or more subjects, failed eighth grade math, and received a low score on a basic skills test.

Five teachers are involved in the day-to-day administration of the program. Originally, a team teaching approach was envisioned with extra time to evaluate material, but to date, there hasn't been much time to interact and talk over specifics.

Ten special needs youngsters are also in the classes. When Bridget Zukas asked whether the program is really helping them so they don't feel "overwhelmed" Cleo Fredette, director of special education, replied there's an improvement in terms of grades and attendance. Also, the youngsters are experiencing a higher level of self-esteem.

In attempting to discover how successful the program has been so far, Bob Peterson asked what changes are evident in participating students.

Math teacher Ben Levy said there is a higher success rate this year as compared to last year, when the record of success was "not significant." He pointed to one child who was better motivated and moving ahead at a faster rate than last year because he was better able to grasp math fundamentals.

Another math instructor, Virginia Blodgett, said the youngsters feel good about themselves and this "spills over" to the rest of the school day. Because teachers can deal with pupils on a one-to-one basis and get to know them better, the students are better motivated and not as apt to be absent and fall behind.

Dave Moriarity, English Department head, summed up the program's impact by saying it has brought the failure rate way down, cut absenteeism, and had a good impact on the total academic program. He personally has seen a 30 percent increase in English grades this year.

One student, who wasn't enrolled in school last year, Moriarity said, even made the honor roll with a 91 percent average.

Phil Fenton was adamant that these classes should have been started years ago as they provide an effective way of teaching.

Students enrolled in the program attend a total of two or three of these classes a day and then proceed with their regular schedules. Because of the close relationship between teacher and pupil in this program, Tony Acardi said, it's easier to be a success, but he wondered whether other students in the school might be losing out in some way.

Fredette pointed out that some pupils need more from the system than others. And it was generally agreed that this program is there to fill a need that doesn't detract from other high schoolers' education.

In the end, Woods said that even though the Alternative Education program was still "in formative stages" and some problems still have to be worked out, "progress is being made" and the success rate is directly attributed to the teachers involved.

What does the PG-13 movie rating mean?

By Rochelle M. Flynn

Movies certainly have changed. When we send the kiddies to the Saturday afternoon matinee, they are no longer watching Flipper and Lassie, but Conan the Barbarian and Luke Skywalker. Nudity, or at least partial nudity, is generally accepted in family films, as is profanity and violence.

A recent brouhaha erupted over the excessive violence in the films Gremlins and Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom. The end result being a new rating from the Motion Picture Association of America (MPAA), PG-13, meaning that the film may not be suitable for children under the age of 13. And, if it weren't for this new rating, parents would have no idea as to what movies are proper for their children. Or, would they?

Globe film critic Michael Blown says that the new rating was originally designed to give parents some definition, but what it really did was move an R rated movie down to PG-13, making more movies accessible to teenagers.

Blown says he is in favor of even more explicit ratings that will briefly define the content of a film, such as PG-13 (language). "But, people who want to change the ratings, and get certain television programs off the air, are really not taking enough responsibility. They have an obligation to their kids to explain scary films and violence," says Blown.

Blown says that he explains cinematic manipulation to his young son in terms he will understand, such as showing him pictures and explaining special effects.

TAB film critic David Brudnoy says that he fears the rating system could develop into ridiculous proportions. "This could evolve into 28 different ratings, with R-V for violence, R-S for sex, and B, for boring," says Brudnoy.

"I don't think that the rating system is necessary, but it is useful for parents who want to know what their kids are getting involved with when they see a movie. But, I don't think that Americans need to be treated any more like children than they are," he says.

Brudnoy suggests that people can take responsibility for the films that they, and their children attend, by using the rating system as a starting ground, and then relying on film reviews, advertisements, and common sense.

Brudnoy says that it is neither violence nor sex in films that is

The making of a television movie

By JIM ROUILLARD

"Well burn me or hang me, but I'll stand in the truth of Christ."

Part III

—George Jacobs, hanged for witchcraft, August, 1692

We come now to the promised conclusion of this winter's tale of witchcraft — a tale begun by our New England forebears — men and women steeped in the harsh religion of John Calvin — whose daily toil was as rigorous as their religion.

Today we'll end the story of the filming of "Three Sovereigns for Sarah," filmed in Danvers, Salem, Hog's Island off Crane's Beach in Ipswich, and at the Saugus Iron Works.

Finally, it's time to talk of hanging — of "durance vile," the jailing of Sarah Cloyce in a New England winter in an unheated shed — and "peine forte et dure": the piling on of heavy weights upon the chest of an accused wizard until he died.

As for Vanessa Redgrave, lead actress who plays the title role, my interview with her came at the end of a long, exhausting day for both of us. I had spent almost the entire day at the set — with a break in the afternoon to attend a funeral.

As the sun westered, Miss Redgrave came out to dispense ice cream pie to the children in the cast and anyone else who wanted a piece — and to be photographed and interviewed by a local television crew.

She talked about the characters in the play: "These were all ordinary people in a very great crisis," she said, "thoroughly nice, honest women who worked hard all their lives. Suddenly this accusation hit them, and they became exceptional people, with exceptional courage."

"These women were treated barbarously."

As for my interview with her, it consisted of one question: "Miss Redgrave," I said, "do you see any parallel with what happened here in 1692 and what is happening today?"

"Can a cat look at a queen?" is a remark attributed to American artist James Whistler in conversation with British actress Lily Langtree.

I had forgotten about Miss Redgrave's impending suit with the Boston Symphony Orchestra — and meant the question simply as an opening, in order further to explore her thoughts and the ideas I had earlier discussed with some of the other principal characters, historians and crew.

But she must have perceived the question as appertaining to the upcoming suit. "Who is asking the question?" she asked, in a voice both sweeter and more regal than Mary, Queen of Scots could ever have achieved. I realized instantly that I had turned her off. But those eyes, those beautiful, piercing eyes...I was swimming in them, simultaneously confused, embarrassed and dazzled.

"Ah, Middlesex East," I stammered.

"I cannot answer that question," she said, in a very quiet voice. "But I'll discuss the play."

Whereupon one of the children, obviously strung out from her long day on the set, said to the actress, "Miss Redgrave, thank you for the ice cream and I...I..." and promptly burst into tears.

"And you're tired, aren't you," exclaimed the actress, gathering the sobbing child in a large hug as Miss Redgrave and the entire cavalcade whisked away, back into the meeting-house for still more shooting (the actors and crew often spent 12 and 14 hours at work each day, I was told).

But, however Miss Redgrave took my question — she remains a queen — a consummate actress ("the finest we have today," according to actor Donald Symington) — and very beautiful.

So to return to the witchcraft trials, and the play itself:

"Contrary to popular history," said Richard Trask, "it seems to be the ministers,

The drunk driving message

The holidays are long over, and the verdict on the impact of the state's anti-drunk driving campaign during that period is in: according to state police officials, the intensive "the party's over—don't drink and drive 'cause you're gonna get caught" message worked, because the two week period over the holidays turned out to be one of the safest holiday driving periods in recent history.

This doesn't mean state and local police are about to let up on their hard-hitting approach, so if you drink and drive, don't lull yourself into a false sense of security and expect to get behind the wheel drunk and get away with it for long. That was the latest message this columnist got from a state police spokesman the other day.

"We're not about to let up on our increased patrols, nor are the road blocks going to stop," he said. "In fact, they're going to get heavier, particularly as we get closer to spring."

In addition, he added that the registry and local police are going to be backing up state police efforts with intensive efforts of their own. "You're chances of getting caught are better than ever," he indicated.

You have most likely noticed that one of the principle means the state police and Governor Dukakis are using to pound their anti-drunk driving message across to the public is television spots. Positively the most powerful of those is the one in which you see a drunk driver being pursued by a whole fleet of state police cruisers, which gradually fan out across the highway while the message "The Party's Over" flashes across the screen. We can thank Sgt. Jim Sartori, the Mass. State Police Public Information Officer, for having produced this most striking anti-drunk driving public service spot to date. You may recall the brief but informative interview with Sgt. Sartori that appeared in this column shortly after the state police conducted one of its most intensive road blocks to date at the Rte. 128 — Rte. 38 rotary in North Woburn in late October.

Even though everyone agrees that it's about time there was a crackdown against drunk driving, not everyone agrees that Governor Dukakis is approaching the drunk driving problem in the correct manner. There are some who feel he is putting too much blame on a small minority of people, namely bar owners and the managers and employees of their drinking establishments.

Those who earn a living working in bars, restaurants and hotels are the first to admit that there are bad apples in their industry who just don't care if one of their patrons gets too drunk and then goes out onto the highway and kills somebody. The overwhelming majority of the hospitality and restaurant-bar employees this columnist spoke to didn't attempt to make excuses for the careless minority. Generally pleased with Governor Dukakis's decision to ban happy hours, their dissatisfaction rested in other areas.

The manager of one local drinking establishment explained: "The banning of happy hours is actually working in our favor. Bar and restaurant owners are feeling relieved that they don't have to participate in fierce competition to get patrons into their establishments by waging price wars and by having to give away the house to keep up with the guy down the street. The problems associated with the governor's campaign center on who is truly at fault when a person drinks too much and then gets in his car and kills an innocent bystander."

He went on: "The governor, who apparently doesn't frequent many bars, doesn't realize the problem drinker is often under twenty-five and frequently abuses other drugs as well as alcohol. We can't be responsible for the kids who slip into the bathroom or out to their cars to do a line of coke or to smoke marijuana. These combination abusers are most often the real source of your problems on the highway. You can say that that isn't true, that there are a lot more drunk adults on the highway, but I say no, because

"Family Living Series" at NEMH

The second part of the five-month long "Family Living Series" begins on February 4 at New England Memorial Hospital in Stoneham. This series of workshops is designed to help parents, parents-to-be, and those who work with children better understand the developmental stages of growth.

Three sessions in February offered Monday evenings from 7:30-9:30 p.m. will focus on "Early Preschool and Kindergarten — Discovery Through Play". How family interactions guide the child's learning of social, emotional and thinking skills will be explored. These workshops will also act as a forum to discuss common issues that arise during the ages of 3-5 years.

On site babysitting is available during the workshops for the cost of $1.00 per child. For additional information and to register, contact the Health Education department at New England Memorial Hospital — 665-1740, ext. 426.

as upsetting to children as are themes dealing with death, or loss. "Children cry when Bambi's mom dies, not from grossouts. I would have more trepidation about taking a child to see Terms of Endearment than Gremlins," says Brudnoy.

George Mansour, owner of Cinema Selections, a film booking company, says he does not find the MPAA ratings system to be very productive. He says that a better method would be to make information about the films available, and interested parents could look into them, just as they investigate books for their children. "People should be responsible for themselves and their children, and they shouldn't ask other people to take on this responsibility," says Mansour.

"But, children don't need to be protected. Everything is accelerated (in society) these days, and a child's phase of innocence is shortened. Little kids have always wanted to see horror. Let them see everything and get it out of their systems," Mansour says.

"I don't think that there should be censorship. If you are offended, then don't participate. This is a capitalistic society, and if something is not patronized, it will go away," says Mansour.

Taking a similar stand against anti-censorship is Sheila Decter, executive director of the New England Region of the American Jewish Council. "While I might personally censor things — television or movies — for my children, the question is whether or not I want the government or religious officials to play this censoring role," says Decter.

She continues, "Historically, we have seen how censorship has been used to destroy groups or individuals — think of the Inquisition, Galileo, and McCarthyism. The Jewish community has a very strong anti-censorship feeling. People should make their own decisions as individuals. This is the best way to protect a democracy," says Decter.

On the other end of this spectrum is the Catholic Church, which firmly believes that its members be guided. George Ryan, entertainment editor for The Pilot, a catholic newspaper, says that the church is totally against violence in films. "Seeing a steady diet of violence can cause a violent reaction. The younger the person, the more susceptible he is to the images of violence in movies," says Ryan.

In order to guide Catholics, the United States Catholic Conference, consisting of bishops, issues a weekly list of reviews and ratings of movies, which are published in catholic magazines and newspapers.

"The Conference is a group of qualified people who screen films, usually in New York, review them from an artistic point of view, and make a moral judgment. The purpose is to guide those who cannot possibly attend every movie," says Ryan.

The rating system consists of five different categories: A-I (general patronage), A-II (adults and adolescents), A-III (adults), A-IV (adults, with reservations) and O (morally offensive). The word "recommended" appears behind the titles of those films that the Conference feels deem this recognition.

In some cases the Conference's ratings are stricter than the MPAA's ratings. For example, a popular movie with teenagers this past summer, Conan the Destroyer, was given a PG rating from the MPAA, whereas the Catholic Conference rated it O.

and not the magistrates, who started to put the skids" to the witchcraft prosecutions.

But not before 20 had died, including Giles Cory, who was not executed as such, but died, pressed to death by heavy weights progressively piled upon his body. An accused wizard, Cory refused to plead to the charge before the magistrates, an implicit denial of the court's right to try him.

And the hanging scene which Woburn's Rita Doherty witnessed, she said, still gives her "the willies," to remember. "Even though I knew the hanging wasn't real, and I saw the harness they used for safety, it just gave me a shudder to watch it," she said. "In those days they made no attempt to break the neck, but pushed them off a ladder."

"Phyllis Thaxter (the actress who played one of the hanged sisters) was very emotional, very upset by it, and would not be present to witness the hanging scene. Of course a double was used anyway, a stunt-person to take her place, and there was no danger," but the entire hanging scene was utterly grim and moving, Rita said. It was grim even to watch the stunt-people approach the scaffold off-camera, she added, since their harnesses were so elaborate that they had to walk stooped over.

"It felt so weird to think that this actually happened," Rita said, "and the chilling scene was enhanced because the production was so realistic, with three previously executed witches hanging in the background, and then the sudden push from the ladder, the swing and the jolt" which meant death by slow and painful strangulation, with the victims' hands and legs tied together.

Boston actor Will Lyman, whom viewers may recognize as having played Lawrence Washington, George's elder half-brother in last season's CBS production "George Washington," plays the role of Samuel Parris, the minister about whom much of the entire controversy raged. His home provided several of the "afflicted girls" whose accusations started the whole business, as well as Tituba, one of the first accused, and self-confessed, witches.

"Parris' basic insecurities," Lyman said, "stirred up the antagonism and aggravated the situation and fears among the congregation in Salem Village. He may not have been a stand-out villain, but rather a man of too few capabilities for the situation he was in."

There's a line which had been removed from the script, Lyman said, and which he hoped would be restored, because it seems for him, to sum the Reverend Samuel Parris' feelings, when he arrived in Salem Village:

"I don't know whether God has sent me here — or banished me to this place."

Actor Ron Hunter ("Cagney and Lacey"), who plays Samuel Nurse, said his understanding of his role comes from studying "the scant diaries of individuals from the period, who would berate themselves for their sins," and that the witchcraft trials had to come as a great puzzlement and trial to the villagers, who viewed the youth of their period as "very integral to the life — they were looked to as the pride of the community and the future." With his mother accused of witchcraft, it was proposed to Samuel Nurse that he fight the accusation.

"Fight?" asked Nurse, clearly puzzled at the very notion of questioning established authority. "You have to remember," Hunter said, "that the villagers had a high sense of order — and adherence to law and order was a governing principal in their lives. Obviously the hard life of New England taught them acceptance rather than revolution."

Puzzlement, accusation, confession, spiritual and physical torture and death. Despite the fact that this portion of the story is sizable — comprising some of my own interviews and Rita Doherty's more extensive involvement with the making of the movie itself, all that we have related only grazes the story of a very complex and fascinating event in American colonial history.

For a far more complete and beautiful version of the story, keep close watch for the appearance of "Three Sovereigns for Sarah," in May on PBS (Channel 2). It will run on three consecutive episodes of PBS' American Playhouse.

"These women" (and men) according to Vanessa Redgrave, "were treated barbarously." Indeed they were — and all for their honesty. Perhaps one of the most striking ironies is that none of the witches who confessed was hanged.

Instead, it was those victims who, for the act of simple honesty, paid the supreme price, in Rita Doherty's phrase, in the push from the ladder, the swing and the jolt of death by a hangman's rope, or the crushing of Giles Cory's chest.

What happened in Salem Village in 1692?

Once again, from Paul Boyer Stephen Nissenbaum's "Salem Possessed":

"Ultimately, then, Salem witchcraft, by reducing real human beings to a single set of threatening impulses and temptations which they seemed to embody, was a kind of allegory-in-reverse.

"Self-purgation through allegorical projection... was hardly alien to the late 17th-maybe one adult gives me a hard time for every twenty-five kids who come into this bar."

According to this manager, he isn't copping out of his responsibility as a manager by ignoring the problems facing him and every other bar-restaurant manager. He has gone so far as to enlist the aid of a police detail to help control the use of drugs in his rest rooms and in the parking lot. But he noted clearly, "You can never totally stop it."

One group that can be totally stopped from creating this sort of problem for bar owners are the underaged drinkers. "It seems to me to be a more realistic solution to better control who gets into drinking establishments," he said. "A more stringent identification process would help. It's too darn easy for an eighteen-year-old to get a phony I.D. He can use his older brother's birthdate to get the registry to issue him a duplicate license. That's why we don't accept duplicate licenses. The governor is so concerned about keeping underaged people out of bars, why doesn't he institute a fool-proof I.D. program, like the one I understand is being put into effect in California?"

No matter how effective an I.D. program is, nothing will keep underaged people out of bars and restaurants if the establishments don't have somebody to check the I.D.s at the door. It should be mandatory that somebody be at the door of a drinking establishment at all times to verify one's idencentury Puritan mind. Take, for instance, John Bunyan's classic account of one man's journey toward holiness, "The Pilgrim's Progress." As Bunyan's Pilgrim (his name is Christian) makes his precarious way from the City of Destruction to the Celestial City he is beset by a whole bevy of inner temptations which take human form.

"One of Bunyan's allegorical characters, as it turns out, is a witch: her name is 'Madame Bubble.' ... and what happened in Salem in 1692 may have been intended merely to prick Madame Bubble — or to rid, by confessions which would not lead to execution, but to the assumption by a few of a brooding, collective guilt — and expiation by confession.

But in Salem, the authors continue, "events instead slipped downward into shuddering disaster. Some of the accused would not confess to deeds they knew they had not committed, and for their honesty, they died. The ironies are staggering... the only participants to suffer death were those who insisted on remaining faithful to the essential requirement for stable social relationships: simple honesty... the pin that was to have pricked Madame Bubble had somehow turned into a flailing, bloody sword."

Recently there was a case in Burlington where two underaged girls slipped into a hotel lounge because the doorman was not present to confirm I.D.s. Once inside the girls managed to coax two older men into purchasing drinks for them.

"I recall that case," the manager indicated. "The girls got caught by an undercover cop. The sad part about it was that the girls got off with a slap on the wrist, while the bar nearly lost its license for a month and the bartender who the girls claimed served them almost got fired. Maybe an establishment does have to share in the blame, but where do the parents of these kids fit in? Where do these kids get off breaking the law and getting away with it, while hard-working people trying to put food on their table have to be put into jeopardy all the time? The kids and their parents should be held equally responsible too."

Bartenders and waitresses believe they are being unfairly treated by the governor. A bartender to this columnist: "The governor would like to see all bartenders tested to see if they are capable of recognizing when a patron has had enough to drink, which is fine. But it is also being suggested that bartenders be held ultimately responsible when a person gets too drunk. This is leading to the possibility of the bartender needing to be bonded and insured to be protected from lawsuits. Who is going to pay for this. In the long run, it'll come out of our pockets, and then out of the pockets of our customers."

"What will this lead to? It'll lead to every quack in the book thinking he can come into a bar, have a few drinks and then get himself into trouble, just so he can slap a lawsuit against the bartender and perhaps make a few dollars. We're not brain surgeons. We don't need malpractice insurance. People come to me for relaxation. I don't twist their arm into having that first drink. Maybe the real problem is society refuses to reevaluate exactly why it has to turn to liquor in the first place."

One of the biggest dilemmas facing a bartender: "Many drinkers just don't want to surrender their car keys, and will argue savagely for that one last drink for the road," the bartender continued. "This type of drunk can become downright abusive, a jerk. And if a bartender succumbs and gives him that drink and then he goes out on the road and kills somebody, he is the first person to want to turn around and sue the establishment and put the bartender out of a job."

A waitress who works at a Burlington hotel believes that emphasizing the blame on bartenders or waitresses is wrong and encourages irresponsible drinkers to be even more irresponsible. She remarked: "Sure, we've look out for the well-being of the customer, to make sure he doesn't have too much to drink. But the final responsibility should be with that individual. No one opens his mouth and forces him to drink. The governor wants to pass the buck from the drinker to the service attendant. It isn't always that easy to control the habits of drinkers, especially those who have serious problems holding their alcohol."

Another waitress this columnist spoke to came up with a pretty good solution to this dilemma. She explained her idea: "There is no need for this situation to get so far out of hand. When a waitress or a bartender waits on a customer for the first time, she could hand a card to him that states he is responsible for his actions and that she, the waitress or bartender, has the final right to shut him off if it is felt he's had enough to drink. The customer would sign the card, and the waitress or bartender would hold onto it, just in case the customer ended up in an accident. That way the customer would accept the responsibility for his actions, not the waitress or bartender."

The card idea sounds terrific, and it is not unreasonable for bartenders and waitresses, especially responsible ones, to expect customers to take the major chunk of responsibility when they drink. In cases where obvious negligence on behalf of a service attendant can be proved, the service attendant would have to bear the brunt of the responsibility.

In the meantime, the governor should examine the drunk driving problem a step further, so that a doctrine of fairness can be established to protect the responsible people who are trying to make a living in the food and beverage industry. After all, the objective is to get drunks off the road, not to punish those who serve the drinks. That way, everyone benefits.

SALEM'S CHINA TRADE

On Tuesday, February 12, the Peabody Museum of Salem offers as part of China Month in Salem a day trip on foot (bus if icy) with Sarah F. Robbins of the Museum's Education Department and Crosby Forbes, the Museum's Curator of Asian Export Art. The event will start with an illustrated lecture by Forbes, "Highlights of the China Trade Collection from Milton," in which he will give particular attention to objects with Salem association.

Lunch will be at the Essex Institute's Cotting-Smith-Assembly House, an 18th century building on Federal Street.

After lunch the group will visit

China Month in Salem is part of a national observance of the bicentennial of the American China Trade. The 1785-1787 voyage of Salem's Grand Turk (one of the first ships to trade with China) led that city into an era of unprecedented wealth.

This tour aims to recapture the spirit of that era.

CAMPING FOR SPECIAL NEEDS

The Eastern Middlesex Camping Fund Committee sponsored by the Eastern Middlesex Council for Children and Denny's Restaurant in Stoneham, is gearing up for another interesting and enjoyable year of raising funds to help send area special needs children to a summer camp of their choice.

The need for such a fund has been clearly established by the overwhelming response of applications reviewed by the committee this year. One parent stated that her child attends a special needs school ten months out of a year. It is imperative that he continue schooling in a specialized summer camp because he may regress.

Children with special needs often attend schools away from their neighborhoods during the school year, where they develop close friendships with other children. When summer comes, they become very lonely and inactive.

Summer camp provides friendships and activities as well as education. It is a happy time to help break up a long silent summer.

Looking forward to next summer and the possibility for these children as well as others, attending summer camp again, the Eastern Middlesex Camping Fund Committee is searching for volunteers to donate a few hours a month to help.

For more information contact The Eastern Middlesex Council for Children, 7 Lincoln Street, Wakefield, Ma. 01880. Telephone 245-5267.

Each class member will prepare a kit for future use "on the job," and will have an opportunity to assist in babysitting children at the NEMH Strawberry Mill Day Care Center during the last class session.

Pre-registration for the class is recommended. Course fee is $10. For additional information, contact the Health Education department at NEMH - 665-1740, ext. 426.

STRESS-FREE LIVING

Physical or mental problems can disrupt a person's ability to structure daily activities or carry out their regular schedule. This disruption creates added stress and a need for lifestyle modification.

By teaching participants how to handle stressful situations, alleviating anxiety and training them in relaxation techniques, the program helps members move towards more secure lifestyles.

ACUPUNCTURE AND PAIN

Acupuncture is a method of healing the body that originated in China approximately 5,000 years ago. It is a natural healing therapy in that it works to create a balance in the body's function. There are no drugs used and consequently no side effects. The body is brought back to a state of health from which point the individual can maintain his health. The acupuncture needles are very fine and therefore relatively painless.

A free lecture on acupuncture and its treatment of pain will be held at the Stoneham Medical & Diabetes Clinic, 106 Main St., Stoneham, Ma. on Tuesday, January 29 at 7:30 P.M. Reservations are necessary.

For reservations and/or information call 438-6132.

Poem

I'm eager to leave here,
My time has come and gone.
I've seen all I care to see
On these city sidewalks
I've been on.
I yearn for the smell
Of country rain.
Barefoot in the puddles
Feeling no pain.
Lying in the sunshine,
Chewing on a piece of grass.
Peace and solitude
Will find me at last.

HAPPY NEW YEAR - 1985
With "84" coming to an end,
And "85" just around the bend,
I'd like to wish you a Happy New Year Full of health, happiness and lots of good cheer.
May it be fun and alive,
A glorious year, that "85",
And with warmest wishes and some love, too,
I hope you find laughter and joy
the whole year through.

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

Please, don't let a "Dear John" or "Dear Jane" letter or a broken love affair 'break you up.' There isn't any 'one and only' in the world for you, me or anyone else. Pick up the pieces and build again.

When my Aunt Maria's husband died, the world seemed to have come to an end for her. She had inscribed on Uncle Angelo's tombstone: "My Light Has Gone Out!" Then she proceeded to shut herself out from the world by becoming despondent, a recluse, a veritable 'hermit.'

She was later introduced to a gentleman at a social event she had to attend; within three months they were married. She asked her clergyman, "What should I do now — have the words 'my light has gone out' erased?" "By no means, Marie," the genial man of the cloth responded. "Just have this line engraved under it: 'I have struck another match'."

A handsome young doctor in a local area hospital said to a pretty nurse, "Marry me, you're too beautiful for 'wards.'"

My wife Kathy said to me, "I dreamed that you bought me a beautiful mink coat." "That's wonderful," I replied, "in your next dream, wear it in good health."

We just got back from a two-week vacation in Bermuda. I got a tan and her tongue got sunburned. I haven't said a word to her in two days — I don't want to interrupt her.

I'll have you know that I wear the pants in my family — usually with an apron in front of them.

Thanks, Florence Gosselin of Winchester, for telling my friend Edmond Baratta that you like Woodchips. I need all the friends I can get because I can't even get in the door at the Woburn Elks without being clobbered with, "I never read or heard such corny jokes in my life!"

Frank Mazonni of Wilmington was showing off how he could play the piano, saying, "Don't you think I play like the great Paderewski?" "Why, of course, Frank," I said, "with both hands."

When Joseph Foley of Tewksbury came to my house last week, I did a little showing off myself, saying, "Joe, what's on top of the house?" My dog looked up then barked, "Ruff, ruff, ruff." Wow, I'll bet I lost some readers after that one.

If you have ever served on a committee, you'll know the meaning of, "A camel is a horse, put together by a committee." On many that I was on, after all was said and done — everything was said, and 'nothing' was done.

A cat can look at a queen and not be awed in her presence. That's the way it should be, who the heck is she anyway — she's only there because of the 'accident of birth.'

There isn't a fireplace in the world that can warm a person with a cold heart.

Officer Richard Serino arrested two boys who shot out a couple of windows with their BB guns. The case was referred to the 'Appellate' Court.

It's easy to spell 'banana.' All you have to learn is when to stop.

There's an old spinning wheel in the parlor, spinning dreams of the long, long, ago. Well, the only place I know where you may find ladies anywhere near a spinning wheel is at Las Vegas.

Exterior beauty is like a flower that fades every hour — but inner beauty last forever. Helen Keller, although blind, could see Mark Twain's inner beauty in his hand-shake, speech and laughter.

Hollywood has most of us conditioned to look for beauty in face, form and figure. I would (like Abraham Lincoln) lose on all counts, but I sincerely hope, like Lincoln, I am recognized for my, 'Malice towards none, charity for all, and the ability to do the right thing.'

Arthur Ferraioli, a clerk at the Tewksbury Post Office, reads Woodchips faithfully in the 'Town Crier.' Not only that, but when I mention anyone he knows in my column, he makes sure that 'they' know about it. Thanks, Arthur.

Years ago, two friends owned farms across the road from one another. The farms were about the same size and grew the same crop — corn. One farmer owned a 10-year-old car and a battered pickup truck. The other gentleman traded, then bought, a new luxury car every year. "How do you do it?" asked the poor farmer. "I just barely make both ends meet!" "Well," said the richer of the two, "we both raise the same crop, but you sell your corn 'dry,' while I sell mine in the 'liquid' form." All I can say is, I'll drink to that!

This message came over the radio: "My radar shows that you are on a collision course with me — I urgently suggest you change course due east 10 degrees." "This is the carrier USS Wasp, with Admiral Greenly aboard, and WE suggest that YOU change your course 10 degrees WEST!" The reply came quickly and to the point: "This is Seaman Harrington, speaking from the 'LIGHT-HOUSE' that you are on a collision course with!"

Congratulations Susan Rando, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rando of Stoneham. Susan was named by the Stoneham Woman's Club as Student of the Month (December). She is the president of the Student Council at Stoneham.

MDC Officers Paul Pierce, Basil Timmons and Bob Giguere were sent to the Stone Zoo area to investigate a man lying down alongside of a storm drain. Bob Giguere made out this report: "Found man alongside of sewer, 'dead.' Apparent cause of death, 'sewer-side.'"

If everything that could happen to your child were of equal severity, knowing where to go for medical treatment would be a simple matter.

But the world is not so simple. The injuries and illnesses your child is prone to require as many different courses of treatment as there are health care facilities to provide them.

It gets confusing.

We'd like to make it simpler.

At the HealthFirst Walk-In Medical Center in your community, our highly qualified doctors, nurses and technicians are equipped to take care of most of the boo boos you might otherwise — and unnecessarily — take to the emergency room.

We're actually part of the established medical system which includes private practices, hospitals, and specialists. And we're associated with prestigious institutions like Beth Israel and University Hospital.

The Rhine, the romantic "River of Wine"

Part 2

By CHARLES C. RYAN

Watching the turbulent waters of the Rhine (Rhein) River rush past, pulling fiercely at the docking buoys, it's easy to think the turbid river never ran clean. Even without industrial and municipal wastes dumped into the river, its violent, churning action would still make the water murky and dangerous.

For Captain Bodo Stratmann aboard the "Taglich," the river provides a daily challenge as he avoids collisions with other tour boats, tugs and barges and outcrops of unmoving rock.

Stratmann has been a riverboat captain for 32 years, and for the last 17 has made one trip a day along the Rhine, upriver from Cologne (Koln) to Mainz one day, back again the next.

He says the river is at its worst in the early morning, when fog hides one side from the other and muffles normal sounds. But he likes his job.

"It is better than working in a factory. There's sunshine," he says, relaxed and laconic.

It's worse on weekends. Thousands of tourists stack the decks of tour boats like so many folding chairs, each jostling for a place in the sun, a view of the castles and gingerbread towns passing by.

If you like, you could spend several days on large riverboats as they glide from one end of the famous river to the other. But by most accounts, the best scenery is between Cologne and Mainz, or better yet, between Koblenz and Mainz.

We had skirted the river for three days, driving downriver along its northern banks and swinging back along the farmlands on its southern side. Now we had left the rental car we had picked up in Frankfurt and we were prepared to ride the river itself, from Koblenz to Mainz.

It was Thursday, July 12, and a mixed collection of people queued up waiting for the Koln-Dusseldorfer Steamship Company's boat to arrive. It was sunny and warm. Conversations in French, German, Italian, Spanish, English and Urdu, among others, filled the air with excitement as the ship was spotted off in the distance.

EHRENFELS CASTLE perches along the banks of the Rhine near the town of Rudesheim in the middle of wine country.

slicing upriver toward the docking raft.

The ship swung in, ropes were tossed and anchored, passengers disembarked, goods were loaded and we all boarded. It took but a few minutes and the ship was off again, a schedule to be kept.

Baggage was stored inside the main entrance on the lower deck. We headed up a deck, and forward, among the first to reach the upper deck and bow and able to stake out good seats. The ship wasn't crowded. Just behind the open bow area was a glass-enclosed dining room.

Two tickets were almost 100 Deutsche marks, at 2.7 DMs to the dollar, or about $18 apiece. We were scheduled to arrive in Mainz, just outside the Hilton Mainz, around 7 p.m. Film, cameras and lenses at hand, it was time to sit back and let the beauty of the Rhine unfold slowly as we cruised along.

The bright sun reflecting off the water and illuminating the shores of Koblenz brought a festive atmosphere to the cruise. Tourists joked and pointed out the sights to each other. Stewards sold soft drinks, coffee, tea, beer and wine.

Some sat inside, sipping a drink and watching the greenery and medieval-looking towns pass by, oohing and aahing at the castles, perched like sentinels along the rocky crags which shepherded the river on its serpentine course.

Other ships and boats filled the river: smaller and larger tourist boats, decks spotted with waving sightseers; powerful tugs pushing barges of coal, crushed rock and other commodities, tankers filled with oil, riding low in the water as they trudged upriver, buoyant and riding high as they fled downstream; and pleasure boats ranging from small one- and two-person kayaks up to large yachts, pennants trailing in the breeze. Everyone waved, even young men foolish enough to have swum out near the middle of the river to grab onto the bobbing channel markers.

Castles passed by: Stolzenfels perched on the right, rebuilt by Kaiser Friedrich Wilhelm IV, gleaming yellow-gold in the sun; Lahneck on the left, above where the River Lahn joins the Rhine.

The Martinsburg in Oberlahnstein, erected at the end of the 14th century, the Marksburg, high over the town of Braubach, both brooding on the left. The Marksburg Castle, built in the early 1200s, is the only castle along the Rhine to have survived largely intact. Restored in 1607, it somehow escaped the ravages of two World Wars, suffering only repairable damage to the top of its tower.

Almost all the castles are surrounded by vineyards, the flanks of their hills terraced with rows upon rows of greenery in neat lines, the river, a wide, silver ribbon below.

More castles and quaint towns flow past the Taglich as it pushes upstream. Each new sight demands attention, like a page from a living history book, telling tales of industry, commerce, politics and war.

the other side after she passes by, loaded with passengers, cars of all makes and models, buses and trucks. Tugs, too, ply the busy waters, pushing barges loaded with assorted goods back and forth between sister towns, paired to each other by the river, but forever divided by its breadth and rapid flow.

Lunch aboard the Taglich was tasty, inexpensive and filling. The offerings went from snacks to full meals, and the curry sausages we chose were plump, juicy and excellently seasoned. Lunch, however, doesn't interrupt the view through the large glass windows surrounding the dining area. Nor is the dining room crowded, so there was room to keep the camera handy on the table, ready to be used each time a new castle or town hove into sight.

Miles of vineyards float by, interspersed with towns and an occasional trailer camp near a beach along the river's banks. Soon we are approaching familiar territory. Ahead on the left is Loreley the legend. Loreley the towering rock. Loreley the cause of tall tales and many lost lives.

Legend has it a beautiful woman with golden locks of hair and a long dress, white as mist, came to the crest of the rock each twilight and sang songs of such charm that they lured curious boatsmen closer and closer until they were blinded by her beauty and ran into the rocks and reefs lying below, never to be seen again, taken away by the swift current.

The tale harkens back to the Greek legend of Odysseus, who had himself tied to his ship's mast so he could hear the song of the sirens without leaping to his death.

A short distance past Loreley, castle perched on a low-lying, rocky island in the middle of the river, one side shaped like the prow of a ship.

The Taglich passes its unmoving counterpart and moves on. The rocky hillsides along the river gradually open out. Slopes become gentler and soon the town of Rudesheim, with its three castles and regular winery tours, appears. Rudesheim's location along the river makes it a regular stop for tourists sailing up or down the Rhine. A visit there and a brief ride in a gondola will provide a tour of a typical winery and when you are done you can catch the next boat and continue your cruise.

We chose this time, as the river widened and the number of castles lessened, to retire to the glass-enclosed dining area on the lower deck and have dinner. It was a tad too late for a hot supper, but the menu still offered a variety of cold-cut arrays. The roast beef and pork were excellent, along with a bottle of wine from Rudesheim.

Any trip must come to an end and this trip ended as the Taglich pulled into Mainz and docked only 150 yards or so from the Hilton-Mainz, perched on the river's bank.

THIS 2,000-YEAR-OLD Roman boat, found along with eight others during the excavation for the addition for the Mainz-Hilton, is on display at the hotel's city-side entrance.

weekend package for 68 DM per person. If you do visit the hotel, try Beller's "stairway to heaven," a selection of five wines, from dry to sweet, which will either remind you of where you have visited, or point the way you might want to go on your tour of the Rhine.

MARKSBURG CASTLE broods above the town of Braubach along the banks of the Rhine River.

the ship approaches the town of Oberwesel and the Castle Auf Shonburg, where we spent our first night in Germany. The castle looks even more impressive from the river as it stands watch over the town and cathedral below and for a moment you are tempted to disembark and stay another night.

But the ship moves on, up river, and soon approaches one of the more curious castles on, or actually in, the Rhine — the Pfalz.

Victor Hugo called it "a ship of stone eternally floating on the Rhine," and for a moment it does look like a ship. But then the picture resolves into a

As modern as the Hilton-Mainz is, it too, has its historical aspects. Executive assistant manager Siegbert Beller said when the hotel recently expanded, adding 195 rooms in a wing on the city, or cathedral side of the building, the excavations uncovered nine well-preserved Roman boats, believed to be 2,000 years old. All but one were turned over to a museum for restoration while the remaining boat now decorates the city entrance to the hotel.

The Hilton-Mainz has all the luxuries one might expect in a first-class hotel and offers in season a special get-away

If you knew the facts about leasing, you'd never buy a car again!

For some unknown reason, the many advantages of leasing a car versus buying one continues to be one of the best kept secrets in the automobile business. Furthermore, a longstanding misconception states that you have to own or be in a business to lease a car. Not true! Anyone can lease. And most people should.

Come in and let us prove to you that leasing is truly the intelligent alternative to buying a car.

Ski in your own backyard

Winter sports enthusiasts are being given a new "lift" this season via a detailed new "Ski Massachusetts" brochure from the Massachusetts Department of Commerce. Part of the state's "Spirit of Massachusetts" campaign, the brochure invites skiers to "catch the winter spirit" and test their skills at the state's 59 downhill and cross country ski areas.

The fold-out brochure presents the variety of skiing available from Boston to the Berkshires, details the special features of each ski area. All of the downhill ski areas listed have snowmaking and 90% offer night skiing. Cross country areas feature groomed trails and such extras as full-moon tours, toboggan and snow-shoe runs.

A free copy of "Ski Massachusetts" and the "Spirit of Massachusetts" Winter Calendar of Events may be obtained at state tourist information centers or by calling toll-free in Massachusetts 1-800-632-8038. Written requests may be sent to: Massachusetts Winter Spirit, Department of Commerce, 100 Cambridge Street, 13th Floor, Boston, 02202.

"I Learned More Than I Thought I Would."

ATI FACULTY "Go(es) All Out For The Student."

Recently we got these comments from several recent graduates of ATI's programs:

Chris McHugh (Electronics) writes:
"I enrolled in ATI's Computer Electronics program to learn about electronics and their practical application. I have received a very good understanding of electronics and computer internals."

In addition, the services offered by ATI are excellent. I learned a lot about job finding, interviewing and nailing down concrete leads. I am going to miss ATI and will always give the school a good recommendation."

Gal Perito (Electronics) writes:
"I learned more than I thought I would. (and I wish I could have had more time. Russo (the teacher), has a great way to relate to the students, which helps us to understand better. I love it (ATI Services). They go all out for the students and show you how to have more confidence in yourself."

Finally, Jim Stallings (Refrigeration & Air Conditioning) writes:
"I got a lot out of this course. I feel good about what I learned here and if I had to do it again I would."

ATI CARES

Do these comments sound exaggerated? Let me assure you they are not. Just look at the facts:

1. You will be trained by a caring, involved, highly skilled instructor.
2. You can choose to attend either full time day (7 months) or part time evening classes (12 months).
3. ATI is well equipped and conveniently located at the intersections of Rt. 93 and Rt. 128.
4. The training emphasizes Hands-On so you learn by doing.
5. ATI is accredited by NATTS and is approved for Vets training. If you are eligible you can receive financial aid.

6. You can rely on ATI's years of experience and years of prior local placements to aid in your job search.
7. Limited Class Size to make sure you can get all the personal attention you need.
